

Kyle Schueller

Your attempt to impose excessive regulatory measures to constrain small businesses is remarkable!! What reasonable business owner would deliberately place their employees at risk through overexposure? This appears to be nothing more than an effort by bureaucrats in Santa Fe to justify their positions by implementing additional regulations under the guise of 'safety.' The regulatory authorities should be required to provide empirical evidence and comprehensive studies demonstrating that there have been significant documented issues with small business employers endangering their employees through overexposure.