

Karl Kiser

I strongly support a rule to protect workers from extreme heat while on the job. Further workers must be protected if they report violations. It is easy for employers to avoid responsibility if workers are not free to report violations. Next any employer plan, to mitigate heat, must receive input from workers. Those in the field possess knowledge which management might ignore or miss.