

Harper O'Connor

Refusing to allow workers shade and water breaks in the intense heat our state often experiences is not just cruel, it is intentional endangerment. Heatstroke can occur very quickly and even kill if not treated. Recovery time averages a week. It is more humane and more cost effective to prevent these situations in the first place. Prove you actually care about other human beings and let them cool off and rehydrate.