

Mary Armstrong

You're trying to make a rule that would hinder our workers. Every employer does have a responsibility to care for their workers, but the workers also have a responsibility for themselves. Most people know or should be educated by their employer about heat stroke or heat exhaustion. Common sense should come into play for the workers to know when to get out of the heat and take measures to hydrate and cool down.