

Michael Merriman

Adopting these standards will protect workers and improve quality of life. I'm sure many employers already have a work/rest policy for very hot and very cold days, but this regulation will bring everyone up to a more humane standard. I can personally attest to the importance of breaks during very hot weather, as these are very similar to the standards we use in the military.