

Ann Cashman

As a Borderlands resident and someone who wants to continue the rest of my years living here, I can't condone the actions behind what shady deals and the sheer recklessness behind our local government officials it is to let Project Jupiter destroy this beautiful place we call home. I originally was born in a place where our water was so polluted it is now known as the cancer belt. I will not stand idly by as Project Jupiter plans to do the same to the air we breathe and the water we drink. Project Jupiter wants to use fuel cell technology to create and supply electricity to the data centers. These fuel cells use methane gas that will require miles of new pipeline. Even without leaks, the fuels cells will release 10 million tons of carbon dioxide, as well as myriad other hazardous chemicals and compounds into our land, air, and water. This pollution isn't only harmful to wildlife and plants, it's also incredibly harmful to human health. If we want life to continue here in the Chihuahuan Desert, we cannot have Project Jupiter here.
