

Kathleen Tingley

As someone who visits the area on a semi regular basis, this building should never be built, let alone be granted an air quality permit. There is zero reason to pollute the air- there are ways to build which does not need an air quality permit. This is an example of the good people in the county being taken advantage of and lasting effects on the community- both the lasting air quality and the quality of life that occurs with living next to a data center. As a visitor who will not visit the await the data center is built, I know I am not alone in my conviction.