

James Gilliam

The use of any energy source other than solar in New Mexico for a data center is truly ridiculous and unacceptable. If a company that large needs that much energy it should generate it itself without artificially increasing local demand and prices for natural gas, pumping our air full of smog, and giving no thought whatsoever to climate change, which particularly affects New Mexicans. I am not in favor of this permit's approval.