I'm not sure if my voice will even reach anyone, but I gotta say project Jupiter scares the crap out of me. There's already a limited amount of water in Mexico and this mega ai data center in development is planned to take up to 1 million gallons a day? That's crazy, not to mention this'll dry up what little water is in the neighboring towns. We need to leave a better, healthier planet to the next generation, so they don't have to spend their entire lives making the planet habitable again. Think about the world you want to leave behind for your sons and daughters, if this thing is promised to be built it'll poison and kill everything surrounding it, including but not limited to, plants, animals, people and the surrounding environment as a whole.
