

Amy Mc Menamin

My name is Amy and I am a 17 year old student in Ireland. This summer was the hottest summer ever recorded in our history and it will only continue to get hotter due to climate change. I am young, my life is only just beginning and yet my future, my planet, has already been set to be destroyed before I even graduate university. I have grown up "privileged" because I have always had access to clean water, but water shouldn't be a privilege, it's a human right. If project Jupiter is to succeed more people on this planet will lose this right. This planet was created with enough resources for us to all live and thrive. Corporate greed has blinded people into caring more about paper money then caring about their own people, their own species, their own siblings. I choose to write this letter to speak up for those who can't. I might not be rich, but I am considered "privileged" because I have access to basic resources that everyone on this planet deserves. No matter what god you believe in or if you believe in any god at all, if you are a human being, you will fight to save the planet we all call home.
