

Molly Steagall

The construction of data centers approximate to residential centers immediately contributes to the decline of quality of life while straining resources that produce nothing positive for the common good. The emissions from greenhouse centers are now contributing to a heat bubble above the United States that is tumbling the world towards a climate disaster that we will certainly experience in the very near future. Nobody needs or wants this besides the greedy elite class, which will likely use this to enable AI systems that worsen our surveillance state, or systems such that have been used to slaughter the innocent population of Gaza and remaining Palestinian settlements. Allowing the construction of this data center is not only a betrayal to your constituents, but to humanity.
