

Martha Patterson

New Mexico already lives in both a drought and water debt. Building a massive data center will only exacerbate these already existing issues. The people who suffer the most from these choices are neighbors to all of us. We've seen the impact on communities previous data centers have made, as well as how detrimental these impacts have been on those residents. Building Project Jupiter negatively affects every resident of New Mexico, and is not necessary to achieve more economic growth when other options exist.