

Kathryn Bosley

The deceitful campaign used by Project Jupiter to produce false supporters should be enough to convince anyone with a shred of ethics to deny their permit. Frankly, the company should be investigated for feigning public support.

Data centers are viewed as a scourge by the public, and local governments across the country have denied the will of the people by ignoring their outcry. No number of sustainability justifications will change that fact.