

Alonso Herrera De Los Santos

The El Paso - Las Cruces metropolitan area consists of over 1 million people. 1 million people whose entire existence in this area is possible because of resources like water and clean air. With an already exceedingly hot climate that is creating a risk to water, a data center will be the nail in the coffin to eliminating possible habitation of the natives to this area and will eliminate any future growth. By allowing this data center to proceed with being built without creating any infrastructure for it to be operable in isolation without having to be connected to infrastructure that we in this area use, one million lives will be tragically impacted. People WILL be impacted and will most likely die from adverse effects cause by water and air pollution as a result of how demanding data centers are, and especially how demanding this one will be. This massive impact will only result in about 50 non-professional, low-paying long-term jobs, and about 5 professional jobs that will be occupied by people outside the area. You are seriously a sick human to think that this is good in any way for an area that is already in a sensitive environment. I hope getting paid to vote yes on this project was worth destroying an entire region of this beautiful country.