

Suzanne Valentine

Every time this company and Project Jupiter changes their name or claims of what effect their activity would have on New Mexico, they become more obvious in their disdain for the people of this state. I see their AI advertisements on tv where they show a river full of water, supposedly the Rio Grande. But anyone who Lives in the state knows there is currently NO WATER in a majority of the river. They lie in their ads, they lie in their claims, they lie about what the data center will bring to New Mexico.

Approving these new attempts at duping New Mexicans into thinking it's clean energy would show that you, as elected officials, care more about getting money in personal bribes than you do about your constituents and the longevity of our state and environment. Listen to the people who are opposing this. Pay attention to all the places around the country placing moratoriums on building data centers because they cannot be proven harmless. Stop listening to false claims about bringing jobs and remember that having a job is meaningless if you can't live in the state because of environmental damage.