As a southern New Mexico resident, I have extreme concerns about Project Jupiter's potential environmental impact. Some researchers think the new microgrid could produce more emissions than Santa Fe, Albuquerque, and Las Cruces combined. Our state has a goal of zero emissions in the future, and this microgrid does not support our vision. Their proposed system has not been tested at this scale. As a resident, I would like the state to carefully examine Oracle's promises with independent scientific study and the advice of environmental scientists.
