

Freddie York

This is inconsiderate to the citizen population of our state, the expanding size and urbanity and our logistics of a state in the Southwest. We shouldn't even be providing our water for corporate interests, let alone this one that calls itself "better for the environment and the job economy" here.

This state is already terrible for employment so why bring in another data center whose primary purpose is to automate more tasks? Take more jobs away from our already precarious white collar situation in New Mexico.
