

Ruth Eriksen

My name is Ruth and I live in Norway, but I still want to take action in this. I'm still just a teenager but hearing all these news about climate change makes me anxious because I'm scared that my future will be ruined because of it, and my future kids will need to live in a world where people don't even care about the planet we live on. At this point I'm more stressed and I care more about climate change than all my exams at school. I don't understand how people can't see that climate change is getting serious.

Even though I live in Norway and I'm unsure if I will feel a difference after this project is done, I still care even if it won't affect my daily routine, because even if I don't live there where it happens, I still live on the same floating rock as this data senter.

I am pretty sure that I am not alone in this. There are tons of people that care about the environment. I think that this project is actually extremely selfish because just because some people want to build another data senter, does not mean everyone wants to. This can affect the ecosystem close by and environment and the air. You don't get to decide what our future is going to be like. When I am an full grown adult I have live with whatever todays people have done to ruin my future.

All I want for my future is a greener world.
