

Marianne Zale

Residents have no want nor need for something else that will consume New Mexico's scarce water supply and strained electric grid. The Project Jupiter commercials are deceptive. Even if the promised 1,500 jobs would be created (which is unlikely), it is not worth the environmental and community consequences.