

As someone who has been born in New Mexico, I hate to see our natural resources already being depleted. In my entire life I have never seen the Rio Grande so dried up. The first time I saw it last year I genuinely cried. The last thing I ever want to see in New Mexico is data centers. We are not going to allow millionaires to take what they consider cheap land when it has years of History and beauty woven in between all the sand. They are not going to take away our rich beautiful sunsets and our crisp air to add another zero to the end of their net worth. New Mexico is sacred, not cheap, which is how these billionaires view our sacred land.
