

Simon Ashton

Do not do this, I honestly don't think Project Jupiter should happen. The risks seem way bigger than any potential benefits, and once something like that is set in motion, it's almost impossible to undo the consequences. If there's even a chance it could cause serious harm, invade people's privacy, give too much power to a small group, or be used in ways that weren't intended, then it isn't worth it. Some things are better left undone than rushed because of curiosity or ambition. I'd rather see it stopped completely and erased before it becomes something everyone regrets later.