

Crystal Boylan

The thought of having a data center inside of New Mexico is gut wrenching. We are the Land of Enchantment. We are beautiful, breath taking, awe inspiring, a full on spiritual experience. But we are also fragile. Our water and air are precious and necessary for the communities that live and work here and for the animals that can only call our beautiful state home. The promises of money and jobs are fleeting. They will dry up with the water, burn away with the clean air, and we will be left desolate. The powers at be will move on leaving a husk of an ugly building, broken promises, and a shattered ecosystem. Their baubles are temporary, New Mexico is forever. The thought of destroying this sanctuary is heart crushing. We are stewards of the Water, Air, Soil, Peace and Stillness, and People. This data center and any data center is poor stewardship. A wrecking ball to all we hold dear.