

Gillian Taylor

There is no sustainable way for this project to be built. It is widely unpopular, and constituents know that this greenwashed rebrand is just another way to build industry on top of disadvantages populations, whose air quality is already below safe parameters. This project will cause immense damage to an ecosystem that is already deprived of water, and the lasting impact of this damage will be apparent in not just New Mexico, but in the neighboring states as well. The people do not want to be more victimized by billionaires than they already are. For the safety of those communities near the site of the project, the residents of the whole of New Mexico, and the prosperity of the children living in this state, please do not approve this air quality permit.