People should have 60 days more for making such a decision as important and serious as air condition in their country. Having more days would lead to an equal share in the discussion on making the decision. The residents of Dõna Ana are already disproportionately affected. Their air was never in good condition, and it has never met federal standards, which means, that the application regarding air pollution should be rejected. If not, a public hearing must be held in Santa-Teresa in both languages, english and spanish. The issuance of this permit would be an act of environmental racism which is sponsored by the government.
