

Alex Gonzales

New Mexico is already in a delicate state due to ongoing drought and rising temperatures. We can not afford the potential or projected environmental impacts a data center will have on our communities, our environment and our land. A data center is an ecological disaster in the making. As a lifelong New Mexican I oppose any data center constructed in our already water deprived state and demand that the permit is denied.