

Olivia Reyes

Since my last comment was thrown out due to profanity (which is funny because I thought I had a constitutional right to express myself however I freely choose to), let me use more formal words so that I don't hurt your feelings: It's hilarious that y'all probably hired crisis management consultants to help y'all shift the narrative that this will be a "new technology therefore it's going to be better for the environment" when we all know that that is not only wrong, it is deceitful. No matter how you try to spin this into a positive, you are helping billionaires who don't care whether you live or die—in fact, they are actively TRYING TO KILL YOU— to destroy our planet THAT WE NEED IN ORDER TO LIVE at an even faster rate than it is currently going. I implore the people in charge of making this decision in NM to forgo the bribes they are 99.9% highly likely being offered under the table to do the right thing and deny this project from going through. If you are not religious, please think of how our earth has given us so much only for us to bleed it dry. That is morally wrong. If you agree with this project, you can deny it all you want, but you are an immoral human being and a traitor to we, the people. If you consider yourself religious, such as Christian or Catholic, I will leave you with this (since it seems a lot—not all—don't seem to possess even the most basic of moral values): Leviticus 25:23 "The land must not be sold permanently, because the land is mine and you reside in my land as foreigners and strangers." (NIV) Revelation 11:18 "The nations were angry, and your wrath has come. The time has come for judging the dead, and for rewarding your servants the prophets and your people, and those who revere your name, both great and small—and for DESTROYING THOSE WHO DESTROY THE EARTH." (NIV) Your duty as a Christian/Catholic is to be good stewards to the earth that God created for YOU. YOU defile his Word by agreeing to a data center. YOU commit sin by agreeing to a data center. And YOU will be held accountable, both physically here on earth and spiritually in the Heavenly Realm if you decide to vote for this project to go through.