

Maddison Gines

I am a resident of Gorham, Maine. I am very lucky to live in a state where greenery is common everywhere I go. But, others are not. States like Missouri are suffering from loss of water or water pollution due to data centers being created. Billionaires are benefiting from this, but what will happen 10-20 years down the line when there is no land, no water, to create these data centers? What will citizens do? We have suffered enough from the consequences of higher up's actions. Us, our animals, our ecosystems, our whole entire Earth. This project will rapidly destroy the earth, more so than it already is. New Mexico's citizens should be allowed an extra 60 days to speak up and comment on their air quality permit so the community can act accordingly. The air quality permit application should be denied given Bloom Energy's history of illegal dumping hazardous waste. If then, the permit is not denied, a public hearing should be held in Santa Teresa in English and Spanish with a virtual option to participate. Approving this permit would be government sponsored environmental racism as the residents of Doña Ana County are already disproportionately impacted by environmental pollution.