We never needed AI before, why the hell do we need it now?? The western part of the US is in flames right now and it doesn't help that we are in a drought! Why are huge machines that waste water and hurt our communities more important than the actual communities themselves??

Thousands of years of creativity. Thousands of years of innovation. We all did it by ourselves.

That's what makes us who we are: Human. Constantly shoving Generative AI down our throats is destroying our creativity and innovation to the point where literacy is declining, people's trust is declining, the truth of what's happening in our society is declining. All for what? Money? Power?

And what will you do then when you have that? Will you be happy with yourself knowing that you caused so much harm to almost everything you've ever known? Or have you been happy at all?

Building something that I know would cause harm, I wouldn't be happy either.
