No one wants this data center in New Mexico other than AI moguls and whoever is getting kickbacks in the state for attempting to approve this. This is as disliked as the sale of PNM to Blackstone and involved in just as much shady handling as them too. We are a desert that barely has the resources for ourselves to maintain life out here, much less for massive data centers that will inevitably ruin our environment and extract what little water we have. Allowing this to happen would not only be a breach of trust by the New Mexican government of its citizens, but a declaration of war against them. The people are united against this and choosing to allow this protect to continue against our wishes will be a mistake for those in power. I promise you that much. For those in charge, if you actually happen to read this, think carefully about the actions you're taking. People can only be pushed so far to the brink before they break.
