

Janet Nyland

If you have any common sense, you should see that Bloom historically illegally dumps its hazardous waste. Normal data centers also consume a ridiculous amount of water to stay cool, let alone a giant one in the middle of a damn desert? That thing is a ticking time bomb. AT BEST, it'd be a huge waste of money and resources within a short amount of time because that thing WILL melt itself if the AI bubble doesn't pop first.