

James Roybal

My name is James Roybal and I am a software engineer and I do use AI for work. However I want to be very clear, we do not want data centers in new mexico that pull from the power grid and waste water.

However I do think we should have regulations for these data centers to need to run on a high percentage of renewable energies such as solar during the day, and their cooling systems NEED to be on closed loops. A data center being built that does not run on a closed loop water system is a waste in our dessert environment especially when we already have severe water issues.