It's important the NMED says NO to an air quality permit related to Yucca Growth and the YGI Microgrid- now more than ever. New Mexico is already suffering enough from the harmful effects of climate change, and the data center Yucca Growth sets out to build would only make these effects worse with the production of more greenhouse gases than are produced by New Mexico's three largest cities- causing further rising temperatures and lack of water that is essential to the lives of New Mexicans. In order to protect the land we live on from further, irreversible environmental damage, it's important that NMED says NO to an air quality permit for Yucca Growth and the YGI Microgrid.
