

Wiebke Boeing

Building a big data center with limited understanding about the real consequences seems like a big mistake. At times, it's challenging to distinguish between fact and fiction. I encourage you to take time, really look at the repercussions this will have for the local population, weight the advantages and disadvantages and make an educated, not rushed decision. My vote would be on having public hearings and educate the public on facts (not opinions, not special-interest twisted facts).