

Samantha Feliciano

NMED's mission is to foster a healthy environment for NM residents by restoring and protecting the local flora and fauna, especially their most vulnerable communities. This data centers pose a risk of further damaging the health of minority communities who have been statically and disproportionately affected by environmental racism and exposer to contaminates. Residents of NM deserve a chance to review all aspects of the decision being made, especially since the company building the data center has a history of illegally dumping hazardous materials irresponsibly. Outside of their health, the residents want to preserve the beauty of their home, as nature is long lasting and taking care of their home is one of the best things they can pass down to the next generation. Think of your residents now, and of those to come if you do not allow this environmental disaster to take place.