

Aziza Camacho

Im only 20 years old. I want to go to school and get an education in environmental studies and ecology to play my part in helping environmental conservation efforts. I want to be able to wake up in a world that loves and cares about our planet and its resources, unfortunately this is not the world we live in today. In the years it takes to get my degree, before I can do any real change in this world, I want to know every morning when I wake that there will still even be a world to help.
