

Anonymous Anonymous

I don't like the idea of a data center taking away precious resources from our state. We are already in a drought, this will only negatively impact the lives of New Mexicans through the entire state, not to mention the problems that will occur in the Las Cruces area as a result of this data center stealing water, energy, and land to consume with no benefit to our state. The small increase in jobs from this is not worth the cost that will be felt for generations to come. The people living by this data center will lose their quality of life, look at what's happening in Georgia, where data centers are literally shaking the ground and destroying people's homes, poisoning their water, and increasing their home's energy costs. If this project is approved I don't think I'll chose to raise my family here, a state where a massive company can come and bulldoze people's lives and precious resources isn't somewhere I can fathom living.