

Ambrielle Wilkerson

Things like these affect the future that my generation has to live through and attempt to survive. Past generations have already heavily affected our planets ecosystematical health and it's projects like these that will further the damage already done. If we want to maintain a sustainable planet for everyone and help our future rather than further harm it, it's starts with denying projects like these.