I have no allergies but do have asthmas related to particle dust in the air, specifically from living here. Two years ago, I wore a mask to walk the dog. Now only Trelegy helps for the concrete dust. If I moved, no Trelegy needed. Lungs fine otherwise said the pulmonologist. I just rent to be close to family. I cannot move. Yes, I have extra air filtering inside. Filter changes needed MUCH more than factory recommended.

I do think decisions should include information on the total polluters in the area. Back up a satellite photo and just see the Quarries alone nearby. Of course concrete factories and quarries want to be near a road and near towns. Cheaper. But how about spacing them out? The geology of the area does hold plenty of rock. I appreciate possible plans to mitigate the dust but are there hard facts (not just observational data) and really... the spacing is a BIG issue. Oh, yeah, they want to be close to new neighborhoods being built and new roads. Good for contractors, bad for breathing!

That is it.
