Holcim operates many temporary and permanent concrete batch plant throughout Texas and opposes the following addition to the Standard Permit.

"For truck mix plants, the owner or operator shall shelter the drop point by an intact three-sided enclosure with a flexible shroud hanging from above the truck, or equivalent dust collection technology that extends below the mixer truck-receiving funnel"

This requirement is not practical or even feasible for temporary plant that frequently pack up and relocate. Construction of such enclosures when a three sided shroud is already required only adds cost and will be extremely onerous to maintain with our adding any additional control.

This requirement should be limited to permanent plants only or those wishing to take advantage of alternate setbacks.
