

Jenni Carter

My company has been doing inspections since 2005. During this time I have watched property taxes rise, insurance premiums sky rocket, hourly rates to pay our inspectors have tripled, even the cost of a pack of paper has doubled. Not once since I have opened my business has the inspection fee been increased. It is becoming harder and harder to run this business. If the fee does not get increased we will not be able to continue offering inspections. This is a problem for 2 reason. 1 many hard working inspectors will lose their jobs. 2. When stations stop offering inspections because they cannot afford to keep doing them; Texans will have a very hard time getting their annual emissions inspection done. This will create long lines, late registration fees and angry customers. I hope that you will strongly consider raising the fee. This fee should have been doubled 10 years ago.