

Lisa Griggs

These companies can afford to properly store and remediate this waste- this is not acceptable to be spraying this waste all over land that is home to not only humans, but wildlife that depend on the ecosystem to not collapse because fracking companies want the stock price to continue going up and the bottom line to continue going down.

I live in a polluted county from PFAS that has been declared a disaster area by the governor of Texas, Greg Abbott. And yet, our state government is entertaining actively turning the whole Barnett Shale into a fracking wastewater disposal site, not only disrupting human life, but the wildlife such as pollinators that our entire civilization depends on. I do not support this, and it is wholly unacceptable.