I hold my master plumbing license through T.S.B.P.E., my OSSF Installer license is under TCEQ. From that perspective, I believe ethics training is a valuable addition — provided it stays grounded in real field conditions. It should focus on protecting groundwater and aquifers, maintaining integrity in installation and permitting practices, and ensuring honest communication with customers and inspectors. Keeping the content trade-specific will make it far more effective and respected by those of us working hands-on every day to safeguard public health
