

Louis C. Herrin, III

I am in support of the rule's changes, but I would recommend that the ethics requirements be at least one plus hour each year, and not one four hours class once per license renewal. I have been in the wastewater business for over forty-five years and saw what I would call very questionable operations my operators. These operators are professionals just like engineers and lawyers that are require annual ethics training to maintain their license. These operators have one of the most important jobs that keep the general public healthy and the environment clean.
