

Christianne Castleberry

Operators are the front line of our industry to ensure clean safe water for our communities. Requiring substantial and meaningful regular ethics training that is combined with their regular license renewals is absolutely essential to continually highlight the import and impact of professional integrity, or lack thereof. As a professional engineer required to take ethics training annually myself, I can speak to the great value of regular refreshers for clarity and expectations of responsibility to protect the public. I fully support the ethics petition, without modification.