As a 35 year resident of the Lake Houston area, I have observed the continuing damage from Sand Mining operations on numerous occasions. While sand mining is a necessary task and very useful to the construction industry, there are now simply too many people living in the San Jacinto River Basin to allow the mining under the existing regulations. I urge you to adopt regulations that are at least as stringent and comprehensive as those promulgated and enforced by the Bureau of Land Management at the Federal Level. We are wasting incredible amounts of money trying to dredge our way to safety from flooding when the problem is largely created by the Sand Mining industry.
