

Todd McElroy

When considering new best management practices, please create stricter requirements around when rivers break through dikes of sand mines. The cost to the tax payers for down stream dredging should be a major consideration, along with the safety of people and assets who are placed at risk when flooding occurs. Enforcement should include fines that are large enough to cover the subsequent dredging costs.