

Brooke Wolterstorff

Leave our wetlands alone! We have few and far between wet areas in the southwest as it is. The wildlife needs that area to survive. These are places that cannot be easily or ever be replaced. Look at what was done to the area around the Panama Canal. Look at how people finally figured out the mistakes they made and how they are returning the area to its former natural conditions and actually improving the area around the canal benefitting the entire area for the wildlife and the canal. The value of the natural wetlands far outweighs the value of the mine.