I don't see why Southern Arizona continues to be a sacrifice zone for heavy industry - our beautiful, one-of-a-kind landscape has been scarred and torn up enough. This project is a 100% disaster - heavy-vehicle traffic, depletion/contamination of a precarious water table, light pollution, environmental devastation, disruption of critically endangered species, etc. Why does this project keep rising zombie-like from the dead? (Oh, right - mining interests pay off everyone in sight.) No. No. No. And NO.
