I am a small family farmer, and this is just going to be putting another burden on my operation potentially cause harm to my crops because of the timing to get the notification done. More than that it's unnecessary. We already have to pass test and do monthly reporting of all chemicals used. Advance notification is just adding of burden that's not necessary. Setting up another infrastructure to get this information and transmit, it is also an additional cost, and all the taxpayers, which is unnecessary and absorbed by those who purchase our goods making food even more expensive than it is now
