

Katharine Finlay

As a biology teacher, I know that if predators are killed off, prey will multiply. Anticoagulant rodenticides kill the very predators (raptors, foxes, etc) that control rat populations naturally. Do not weaken the restrictions that have been carefully negotiated over the years. There are many non-toxic solutions to rodent infestations. We all benefit from a healthy ecosystem.